SERVICE HISTORY

Guard Maiden Mendez proceeded with standard SecServ training the day she turned eighteen and endured the normal one year training and one year probation within the Capitol, during what was regarded a period of increased civil unrest. A period that would be counted as fortuitous as within this timeframe she was reprimanded for over aggressiveness leading to avoidable injury, inappropriate force and disregard for procedure. If the situation had not at the time warranted an increase presence and at times increased force Guard Maiden Mendez would have been discharged. Further certain instabilities were first observed against droids (mostly Sec-Droids) and non-human citizens.

Shortly before the end of the probation period, a new threat emerged. In response to the agitation caused by the increased separatist presence there was a statute passed that amalgamated all the current SecServ divisions into one consolidated Internal Defence Force, in an attempt to bolster the then small standing army that was used to quell the infrequent but sporadic major riots that racked the planet. Again the need for as much competent manpower as possible was required as Guard Maiden Mendez's conduct was considered at times to be erratic and overly violent. This precipitated her often being assigned to the detention areas, often as a guard but more than once as a guest for some minor infraction or other. Enough to warrant a demerit but not enough for dismissal in such turbulent times, over the three years from the IDF's inception she rotated through most of the operational unit division types.

Part way through those three years a request to transfer to the Assault Operations Division was granted and she was assigned to Assault Group Six. This proved to be a natural arena for her frustration, aggression and dislike of in particular droids, helping to fend off one covert intrusion by a group of separatist insurgents. Returning to where her commanding officer was pinned down against his orders, for this act of loyalty Guard Maiden Mendez was awarded the ISC Medal of Valour. This sense of loyalty to commanding officers eventually gained notice eventually leading to an effective promotion by transfer to the Guardian Division.

It was here for the next eighteen months that specialist training was applied to Guard Maiden Mendez. Due to the instability of the local climate a number of decisions were implemented and she was selected for her loyalty and her aggressive nature in pursuit of her mission, both qualities that aided her, plus her status as one of the few female soldiers available made her ideal as the person to act as Guard Maiden to high-ranking female personages.

Currently Guard Maiden Mendez is assigned to <CLASSIFIED>.
